Dedication

We, the senior class of 1964, respectfully dedicate this year's TREASURE CHEST to our friend, teacher, and coach, Mr. Derald Swisher, who has influenced our lives greatly during his years at Twin Rivers High School.

Forward

The following pages of the 1964 TREASURE CHEST expresses only a few of the heartwarming experiences of the past school year. In this annual you will find faces of friends, and pictures of activities in which you have participated. It is our fondest hope that these memories will remain with you, the reader, for many years to come.

"Nothing now is left but a majestic memory."

CLASS PROPHECY

After setting a new pole-vaulting record in the Winter Olympics in Athens, Greece, I Melody Hansen, boarded a Boeing 707 for a sight-seeing tour of the world. Who should stick her head out of the engine but Shirley Kissinger, grease-monkey for the American Airlines. Much to my distress I was greeted by our pilot, Margaret Skow, who told me that after skip day in Chicago she decided to take up flying.

Our first stop was in Madrid, Spain, where I attended a bullfight featuring Spain's most unusual bullfighter -- Smiley George Foeretch. That evening I took in a nightclub, where I was greeted at the door by Judie Cran, the hat check girl. Upon being ushered to my table the floor show began, featuring Marlye Kinne singing, "School Days".

Hearing a voice call "Cigars, Cigarettes, Cigarettes?" I turned to see Monica Ehrhardt approaching my table. While chatting with Monica I learned that our coy Rodney Gress was wooing females on the French Riviera.

The following morning I landed in London, and due to the extreme fog I failed to recognize immediately my taxi cab driver, Karla Erickson. She told me Carla Mathiason now worked as a reporter for the London Times covering Roberta Stoddard, the Great White Huntress, on her Safari through the jungles of the Congo. Karla also told me that Rochelle Toftberg was an upkeep of Shakespeares home at Stratford on Avon. The next day I drove up to see Rochelle. While visiting with her, she told me about Bob Brown who was in Ameterdam, Holland. He was trying to make his fortune by whittling wooden shoes.

After leaving England, I made an overnight stop in Leipzig, Germany. I went to the Museum of Science which had been highly recommended to me by a fellow passenger. Just as I was leaving, I looked over to the display of Periodic Table and saw Kaz Kosajda busy studying the elements. He never could understand the electronic structure of Molybdenum. As I was conversing with him he told me he was Professor of Inorganic Chemistry at the University of Leipzig. He told me that Roger Thompson, THE optometrist, had just made his first million by inventing "see-thru smoke" glasses in Berlin.

Our next stop was Italy. Noticing the excitement, I questioned a villager. He pointed to a gathering crowd, who he said were about to acknowledge the winner of the Grand Prix. Pushing my way through the crowd, I was astonished to see Harold Pelts receiving the world-recognized title.

That afternoon I hopped aboard a sight-seeing bus headed for Rome. Along the way, the beautiful forests brought to mind, Howard Zeman, who was a forest ranger in the Argon Forest of France. In Rome, having my hair styled by Barb Ransy, the famous hair stylist, she told me of having recently coiffured Lisa Taylor's daughter, Lisa Hilton Wilding Todd Fisher Burton.

I boarded a jet for Ethiopia to visit Jeanne Eisenbarth, who was a voice instructor and ballet artist. Flying over Mount Killamajaro, I peered down just in time to see a truck zooming around the hairpin curves. The lettering on the truck read "Frank Collins-Nitroglycerin Transport."

By noon the following day we were in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, where a caravan was just passing through. A merchant told me that it was the shiek, Ray Welter, and his harem.

Receiving a special invitation from the American Embassy in Russia, I flew to Moscow, where I was greeted by Sara Usher, interpreter. She told me of Jerry Jensen's being sent to Siberia for lighting up a stogie during a conference with Fidel Castro. He is now mining 16 ton of iodized salt per day. After the incident Fidel's private physician, Marlys Larson, recommended a complete rest for him.

Catching a train to China, I had planned to visit Bob Aure, a prominent rice paddy farmer. But upon arriving, I received word of his being bitten by a water snake and rushed to the local hospital in Chun-King. A waiting-room attendant told me he was faithfully being nursed by the Florence Nightengale and Clara Barton of China--Sharon Nygaard and Jeanne Johnson.

I made my way up to the heart of Alaska by helicopter. I had not ventured far when I bumped into Gary Cran, the Paul Bunyan of Northern Alaska.

On the way to Shetland Island, where Sandi Selvig was employed as physical therapist for awayback ponies, I parachuted out at the North Pole to put in my Christmas order. Looking around Santa's workshop, who to my wondering eyes should appear but Shirley Clipston and Donna Struthers. Shirley was an interior decorator for dollhouses and Donna was writing poems for Christmas cards.

Taking a boat from Shetland Island, I headed back home. Strolling along the deck I encountered Linda Hawkins, social director for the Queen Mary.

On December 20, 1975, my ship docked at New York harbor. My last stop before heading home was at the U. N. building. There I barely had time for a cup of coffee with Eleanor Movick, secretary to the Prime Minister of Severmaya Zemlya.

As the bus passed through Skid Row in Chicago, I wished I could have stopped at "Jim's Health Bar" to chat with Jim Morey, but time pressed me on.

Nearing Bode City again, I stopped at the Humboldt Oasis where Dick Pederson was manager of the Oasis restaurant. While talking with Dick I told him about all the classmates I had encountered while sight-seeing except for Marcia Dale. He told me she was now married and living on a farm along the Bradgate Interstate.

I enjoyed my trip around the world visiting my classmates of 1964. I hope you have enjoyed it also.
